Col. Magrader's Letter-Again.

From first to last we have doubted the genuiness of this letter. Our conjecture has been, that the getters-up of it-relying upon the friendship of Colonel Magruder for themselves, and upon the generosity of his nature, as it would be evinced toward one with whom he ever had a difference that was subsequently reconciled-had, upon writing it, promptly informed Colonel M. of it, and requested him not to disavow it. But this is only a conjecture.

A correspondent assumes another hypothesis that is certainly worthy our consideration. He

"Colonel Magruder's letter, dated San Diego, California, discovers a suspicion that the difficulty between him and General Pierce would be brought to bear on the election, and he, to throw a mantle of friendship and magnanimity over that difficulty, writes a long list of complimentary testimonials to the General, closing with-

"'I have therefore the honor to transmit to you, as an act of simple justice, and without the fear of misconstruction on either side, (of course he means the General and himself,) the accompanying statement of facts which accidentally came ler my own knowledge. I do not think as poorly of human nature as to suppose it probable that it may become necessary or desirable to publish this statement,' &c., &c.

"And why not publish this statement? Why keep it dark, and especially when it comes from an avowed Whig? It is not believed that Colonel Magruder wrote this flattering unction to avoid the retribution consequent on the election of Gen. Pierce, and the probable persecution he might expect from his infliction of so deep a stain on the escutchion of his friend; but solely from a magnanimous feeling of charity-a feature always seen in men of high bearing and moral courage, to make amends for any wrong or injury done to an impotent and imbecile fellow-being."

Bets and Betting.

In 1844 a Whig could not be backed out in the way of betting-and we lost the election and all the money wagered.

At present much is said of bets and betting.

Win or lose, we regard it as a bad business. The writer of this has never lost and won fifty dollars and counsels are adverse to the practice.

But what does betting prove? Simply that two and anxious to get each other's cash! Leave sporting to sportsmen, and work for victory. Fifty dollars worth of truthful and telling documents do more execution in these days than five thousand in the hands of a stake-holder, and these are emphatically the times in which our country requires each Whig to do his duty!

The Hours of Labor.

We learn from the New York papers that the employees in the Navy Yard at Brooklyn, were suddenly notified last week, by an order from Commodore Smith, chief of the Naval Bureau, at Washington, to work one hour longer every day. As soon as the matter came to the ears of the Secretary of the Navy, he promptly rescinded the order, and the men now labor as before.

The abridgment word, coming from the heart and going to the of the hours of labor is at once a consequence of hearts of all. the benignant inventive genius of the age, and a means of compelling more men to labor. In both it is essential to the welfare of a republic. We commend most heartily the course of Mr. Kennedy, the Secretary of the Navy, and feel assured that his fellow-citizens, in every section of the Union, will hear of his decision with pleasure and approbation.

Galphinism and Gardinerism.

The New York Herald has thus far in the cam paign been the ablest and most influential of all the papers in the United States opposed to Gen. Scott. Others have perhaps labored with as much devotion, but none have shown so much skill, adroitness, enterprise, and research. If General Pierce should be elected, he will, beyond a doubt, remember its services for good.

We desire our readers to keep in view this position of the Herald in perusing the following extract from its columns. It is peculiarly Heraldish, as showing that even its best friends are occasionally liable to be raked by the quaint humor of the caustic scribes in the employ of Mr Bennett. After making its strictures upon the Galphin and Gardiner claims, the Herald says: "We are not sure but the morality of Galphinism and Gardinerism deserves a higher niche in consequence of its ingenious methods of proceeding, and the subtle process of attaining its ends, than the bald, open, and unblushing defalcations which marked and pervaded the highly popular and honest administrations of Jackson and Van Buren, in their days of glory and splendor; and ever W. By this table it will appear that nearly four millions of dollars have been abstracted from the treasury during these honest Democratic adminis trations, by the process of defalcations, or deficiency of accounts. This sum is not even all the amount. Probably the aggregate defalcations of the Democratic administrations, during the last twenty-five years, may reach five millions of dollars, if not more. Now, as a contrast to this, we have only the Galphin and the Mexican claims, amounting, in the aggregate, to probably one and a half or two millions of dollars-being the sums of money supposed to be over and above the actually honest claims; but such sums finding their way into the pockets of the Whig agents and lobby members at Washington. It is evident, therefore, from these figures, that the Swartwoutism during the popular, national, and glorious administrations of Jackson and Van Buren far exceeds the Gardinerism and Galphinism that have taken place under the sway of the weak and imbecile administrations of Taylor and In 1848 the Whigs were afraid to bet-and won Fillmore. The Romance of Reality-The Sterling Case.

A correspondent of the Baltimore Times writing from this city, gives the following interesting particulars of the celebrated Sterling case. The parties interested in its prosecution are now residents of this city, and the unflinching tenacity with which they have pursued the matter hitherto is, no doubt, a guaranty of the way in which they will carry on the war hereafter :

[Correspondence of the Baltimore Daily Times.]

Washington, Sept. 20, 1852. The Democratic Review for the month of August, contains an interesting article entitled "Who owns British North America?" and shows very clearly that the legal right is in the person of a Scotch noblamen, the Earl of Sterling, now in this country.

Having completed his titles, and established his right in 1831, the British Government after much deliberation decided on the ground of the 'political consequences' of the case, to oppose it tooth and nail, and endeavor to destroy it

An English periodical, the "Metropolitan Magazine" for January, 1837, in an article severely condemnatory of the shuffling conduct of the British government in being afraid to meet the case fairly, adds, "It would be just to grant the Earl indemnities, and spare him from being any longer worried by the wolf-dogs of the law.

A majority in the Cabinet, influenced by ar outside pressure of English and Scotch aristo-crats, determined to break down the case, already vainly opposed by the Crown lawyers-and, ac cordingly, having chosen tools fitted for the business, commenced an illegal action to suspend the exercise of the rights, and followed up these measures by most arbitrary proceedings, "un heard of before in a British Court of Justice." So said Lord Brougham in the House of Lords in 1845. But we think any other political trial will give evidence of similar conduct on the part of European Judges.

Scotch Judge, under influence, counte nanced all these measures, and allowed the old family documents to be secretly borrowed up and experimented upon by chemists. The object of these experiments, however, has been to destroy signatures and other material parts of them, with an evident ultimate intention of making a charge of forgery upon papers no longer having their original purity of appearance. This project got wind, and the Judges, for decency's sake, made an order against such secret experiments. But But this was evidently a blind, as they continued just as before.

At length a trial for forgery took place upon document afterwards found in Paris, and which was thought to furnish greater chances of success. This document, it is said, was stolen with other papers from the archives of American papers in France; sent to Scotland, to the agent of the Crown there, and by him forwarded to Lord Sterling, through a woman, an agent of the French Police. This document, from some error of the Crown agent, was supposed to be a forgery. But on having it examined by French authorities, it turned out to be perfectly genuine, and was re cognised and attested as such. Lord Sterling's counsel satisfied, had it brought to Scotland. It was, however, immediately seized upon, and the offer to prove it refused—a most singular pro-ceeding—and he was then peremptorily asked how it came into his hands? Thus escaping the main point of proof, which had been accidentally discovered, to attack him on a scandal of their own manufacturing! The witnesses were tam-pered with, and all those on Lord Sterling's side kept back by collusion with his counsel, "to save the honor of the Crown, compromised by its agents." The Jury gave a verdict for Lord Sterling-but to appease the Crown, condemned the document, although every one of the Crown wit-nesses swore "they believed the writings to be genuine."

A more singular case, and one more full of contradiction, from the close struggle of might with right, can hardly be imagined. The reviewing contains the first portion of the case. The remainder is promised, and we can assure our readers who are fond of such romance in real life, an ample treat.

In a small pamphlet upon our table, published in 1845, contained "two letters to Lord Denman," Lord Chief Justice of England, we have a House of Lords, by Mr. Turner, Queen's counsel, acting for Lord Sterling.

It may not be uninteresting to our readers to know what transpired after the able speech of Mr. Turner had been heard by the Chancellor and other Judges present.

One of them, Lord Brougham, said that the crown "bad no right to interfere with Lord Sterling "in any way." And further characterized its whole proceedings, as well as the conduct of the Scotch Judges, as "arbitrary, unconstitutional, and unprecedented.' In fact, as Mr. Turner observed, to break down a right established by law, they had repeatedly violated the plain letter of the law. The Crown counsel instead of meeting the case appeal to the House of Lords. It appears that it was purposely concealed from Lord Sterling by the Scotch courts, in order to give the House of Lords an excuse, on that frivolous ground, for dismissing the case!! But the exposure of Mr. Turner turned the scales and opened the eyes of the "Learned Lords," and Lord Brougham stated on committee that "it would greatly be regretted

Lord Stirling, unable in England to publish the rogueries of his noble (!) opponents, who have check-mated him in all his attempts to enlighten the British public, appeals to the press of this country to enable him to speak the whole truth. The reaction respecting the case among the upper-tens of the law in London, cannot fa to be beneficial to Lord Sterling, if he is backed Canadas.

IMPORTATION OF RATTLESNAKES .- Among the xtraordinary arrivals with which we have been lately favored from America, none perhaps has excited more sensation than the importation into Liverpool of thirty-six rattlesnakes, which came over in two large cases, accompanied by their owner, M. Some difficulty existed on board in keeping the cases from being 'broached," as the ship ran short of water, and the sailors, hearing a fizzing noise inside the cases, thought they contained bottled porter. The Catholic Test in New Hampshire,

Opposed as we are to the interference of Catholics, as a body, in our politics, and regarding such interference as dangerous alike to our civil and religious liberties, still we have ever advolargest liberty of conscience, and entirely disapprove of that clause in the constitution of New Hampshire which makes religion a test for office. We, therefore, are glad to find that public opinion is denouncing it, and the first honest and onen demonstration we have seen against it, is the following resolution unanimousy passed at the Whig State Convention, held at Concord, a few days ago:

" Resolved. That we believe it to have been the design of the founders of the government to make America the asylum of the oppressed, but never to the subversion of its distinctive character; that it be the refuge alike from religious and political oppression, and that within its boundaries civil privilege should be unabridged by religious opinions; therefore we, the Whigs of New Hampshire, are, as we always have been, decidedly in favor of blotting the religious test from

TESTIMONY IN FAVOR OF DOUGLASS'S CHINESE COPYING INK.—"W B. ZIEBER, ESQ.: I cannot re frain from offering you my unsolicited testimony in favor of Douglass's CHINESE COPYING INK. Without the use of Douglass's CHINESE COPYING INK. Without the use of perset I have to-day, for the first time, taken impressions from eight pages of closely written letters—they are as perfect as the best press copies I have ever seen. As it costs only one-tenth of the price of an ordinary press, you will, I am sure, meet for it an immense demand when its virtues become better known. Hoping for such a reward to the inventor and yourself, I am,

DR. KITTO'S POPULAR CYCLOPÆDIA of Popular Literature.

CONDENSED from the larger work. Bp John Kitto, D. D., author of "pictorial Bible," "History of Palestine," "Scripture Daily Readings," &c. Assisted by numerous distinguished Scholars and Divines, British, Continental, and American. With numerous illustrations. One volume, octavo, 812 pp. Cloth, $3; Sheep, $3 50.

The popular Biblical Cyclopædia of Literature is designed to furnish a dictionary of the Bible, embodying the products of the best and most recent researches in biblical literature, in which the scholars of Europe and American have been engaged. The work, the result of immense labor and research, and enriched by the contributions of writers of distinguished eminence in the various departments of sacred literature, has been, by universal consent, pronounced the best work of its class extant, and the one best suited to the salvanced knowledge of the present day in all the studies connected with theological science.

The pictorial illustrations, amounting to more than three hundred, are of the very highest order of the art.

Lettersfrom Hon. Theodore Frellinghuysen, Judge McLean, Edward Everett, Robert C. Winthrop, Simon Greenleaf, and more than fifty of the most distinguished Ministers and Laymen of different religious denominations in the country have been received, recommending the work in the strongest terms as admirably adapted to Ministers, Sabbath School Teachers, heads of families, and all Bible Students.
